Finally, a place where I can talk about secret stuff…

Posted by tarzan - 2009/02/10 18:24

Hi everyone,

I just joined here and taking a look around. Daddy Brad posted a comment on my wife's and my pregnancy blog so I decided to stop by here and take a look. Thanks Daddy Brad! Very cool stuff here! Glad I'm here.

What I like most is that I can talk about secret stuff here that I cannot on my blog like what in the heck to get my pregnant wife Jane for Valentines Day? She's 16 weeks pregnant. What would be something cool that I could get her?

Should it be pregnancy-related? Baby related? Or not at all? What did you do?

==========

Re: Finally, a place where I can talk about secret stuff…

Posted by Daddy Clay - 2009/02/11 11:52

Because pregnant ladies are hormonal, they are highly vulnerable to the scmaltz. Extremely easy Valentine's day targets (and not just because they are great with child). You hardly need to spend anything to get them going. Our suggestions are here.

==========

Re: Finally, a place where I can talk about secret stuff…

Posted by Daddy Brad - 2009/02/11 15:02

Tarzan, check out this past Monday's Lab for some ideas. You can also take a gander at last year's advice http://tinyurl.com/chbyud

Good luck.

==========

Re: Finally, a place where I can talk about secret stuff…

Posted by nevetsrush - 2009/02/16 01:47

Hey there...I am new here, too!

My wife is having a very tough week (she is now 8 weeks pregnant) and is super sensitive to smell and various foods. I sent her an Edible Arrangement on Thursday. We were going to do a couple of things: eat at Morton's or go down to Palm Springs with some friends; however, we did not do anything because my wife can not even get in the car without feeling sick. I feel so bad for her! Ugggg!!! So our valentines day was spent watching Say Anything for free on cable.

==========

Re: Finally, a place where I can talk about secret stuff…

Posted by John - 2009/02/16 17:26

_____

I'm new as well. What worked for me was getting a card from the baby. She's about 32 weeks pregnant so it's right around the corner, and the emotions are free flowing at this point, so that went over really well. :)

==========